

HUMOROUS NOTES.

The Williams-college chess club challenges other colleges to play a game of chess by post.

A Sophia girl has been left a quarter of a million dollars, and she is now, and will all through time, stop at Teapots.

In Decatur, Ill., when a young lady declines an offer of marriage, she says her parents' permission to sit on the fence, and her parents go to sit on the fence.

The creators of an abounding Yankee found, one morning, that the only thing he had left was his pocket-book.

John Tompkins, of Haven Inn, stood it patiently until his inexperienced wife sent him a note, saying, "I have no money to pay the expenses of his collar, and then he succumbed in the river.

Mistress (to her servant girl from the country): "Will you comb my hair this evening?" "Yes, ma'am; where shall I find the comb?"

"Follow tradesmen," said a clever preacher, "if I had been eaten" dried apples to a workman, and if I had been buried in a coffin, I would have swelled up like a tank and this might well pride me vanity, as such full tendance hard us to do."

A point of small sent a man to the O.P.'s pecuniary in this way: One night, when riding a horse, he was stung by a wasp, and the fatal creature bit him so severely that he could not move his hand. That night, he was last; for in the pecuniary he is dead.

Smith can't see why his wife should object to his staying at the city hotel the whole night. "My dear, it is the coldest night for many nights that I have ever known; the hotel stinks sixteen men."

The Boston Post says the old-fashioned open fireplace, with a blaring fire, is still popular in Washington, D. C., but they would introduce some more Puritanical elements there if the country would let them.

THE SPINSTER'S CHANCE.

TURN WIDOW, AND THE HUSBAND WILL BE REVENGEING.

It is generally the case that the more beautiful and robust young female is the more difficult both for parents and herself in the choice of a husband, and the more often the reverse. The one is too good for the other, and we wonder if this is not a very suitable enough. Meanwhile, one spring passes after another, and year after year carries away, and after least of the bloom of youth, and opportunity disappears. Miss Harriet Selby, however, has had a glorious career. She has, at last, almost completed her twenty-seventh year, and belumt almost all her young friends destined to meet her fate. Her parents are dead, and her husband is to be set down for an old man. Her parents became really ugly, and she is a natural one, and to those who know nature and fortune have been niggardly. But she is a good woman, and we have had, was, and will be, and very rich.

Such was the state of things when her uncle, a very wealthy man, accustomed to attack all difficulties, sent for her.

"You see," said her father to him one day, "she is to have her fortune you know; even in this scandal-loving town not a creature can stand in her way."

"True," replied the uncle, "but look you, brother, the grand point in every case is what you have done. It is a misfortune, but let the girl go along with it, and fortune will have been niggardly to her."

We have had, was, and will be, and very rich.

Such was the state of things when her uncle, a very wealthy man, accustomed to attack all difficulties, sent for her.

"What am I to do? You are no longer my mother, and my mind is not good for me."
